80% of Cumberland County Residents in the Evacuation Zone Can Return Home

Carlisle, PA – Cumberland County Department of Public Safety today reported that 80 percent of residents who were evacuated can return to their homes if they choose to do so. Those residents have been provided specific instructions on what they need to do to return safely.

“Residents have received detailed travel guidance to access their properties,” said Robert Shively Jr., Director of Public Safety for Cumberland County. “We want to reassure the community that structural firefighting crews and equipment will remain on site near their homes as a precaution to help ensure everyone's safety.”

Emergency responders continue to work diligently so that all residents can return to their homes as quickly as possible.

More information will be provided as it becomes available.
